Discover the importance of correct exudate management in this second episode of the new Wound Care Education Series, from Paul HARTMANN.

When it comes to wound exudate management, all too often due to the changing exudate levels/types are not addressed and become a mismanaged component of wound care - what can we do about that?

The following topics will be covered:

- Why is wound exudate management so important?
- What are the challenges around exudate management?
- What are the best practice guidelines for managing exudate?
- What generic dressings are best suited for different exudate types?
- What are the latest advances in exudate management?
